Sherry

Sherry is a fortified wine from Andalucía, Spain that goes through a solera, a system of blending where wines from different years are mixed into each other over time. Sherry can be divided into two main categories: biological and oxidative. In biological styles, a layer of yeast called flor will form over the top of the wine, protecting it from oxygen while imparting a distinct flavor. Oxidative styles do not have protection of the flor and develop rich walnut and toffee notes as they age. The cellar master, called the capataz, guides the wines through aging and determines its fate based on years of practice.

Fino

Fino is the first stop on sherry's development. Fresh and briny, these wines are excellent with marcona almonds and sardines.

Valdespino, Inocente, Jerez de la Frontera, Spain 375ml	$12
Equipo Navazos, En Rama, Saca May 2015, Jerez de la Frontera, Spain 375 ml	$16

Manzanilla

Manzanilla is fino that is made only in the seaside town of Sanlúcar de Barrameda. Their proximity to the ocean breezes makes the sea spray aroma more pronounced than with fino.

La Cigarerra, Sanlúcar de Barrameda, Spain 375 ml	$15

Amontillado

This style is exposed to oxygen later in its aging, combining the taste of flor with nutty, oxidative characteristics.

Bodegas Grant, La Garrocha, El Puerto de Santa María 375 ml	$15
Bodges Hidalgo, Napoleon, Sanlúcar de Barrameda 500 ml	$18

Palo Cortado

Like Amontillado, Palo Cortado is a combination of being aged oxidatively and under flor. A rare and special category, it is between an amontillado and an oloroso.

Fernando de Castilla, Antique, Jerez, Spain 375 ml	$42
Emilio Lustau, Peninsula, Jerez, Spain 750ml	$26

Oloroso

Oloroso sherry is made without flor to protect the wine from oxygen.

Fernando de Castilla, Classic, Jerez, Spain 750 ml	$16
El Maestro Sierra, 15 years old, Jerez, Spain 375ml	$23
